Guess the disney movie character

Take a trip down memory lane that will make you feel AF nostalgia At some point, re-imagining Disney princesses in various contexts became one of the internet's favorite pastimes. From time to time, Disney itself goes into re-contextualization, for better or worse. Now, an artist has put some of the most famous Disney characters of all in the context of anatomical realism. Israeli artist Karen Graw, also known as Avalonis, recently created photorealistic images of the faces of your childhood heroes. While there have been similar efforts to place Disney IRL characters, Graw's images are different, as they legitimately look like an artist's gauzy depiction of flesh and blood people. (L-R) Front row: Rapunzel, Flynn Rider, Mother Gothel, Tiana, Charlotte LaBouffe, Emerald, Frollo, Quasimodo. Row 2: Giselle, Jane, Tarzan, Cinderella, Belle, Prince Adam (The Beast), Gaston, Jafar. Row 3: Mulan, Alice, Jasmine, Aladdin, Aurora, Prince Philip, Maleficent, Cruella Deville. Row 4: Meg, Hercules, Pocahontas, Snow White, The Evil Queen, Ariel, Prince Eric, Ursula. I wanted to know what disney characters would be like if I saw their ID cards, Graw tells us. I know it's been done before, realistic-looking Disney characters, but for me, they didn't go far enough. I wanted to look at the characters and think, 'Hey, these people could exist. There are some Disney doppelgangers running around the world. So I tried as much as possible to cartoonize them. The artist worked for days on the images, using full frontal stills from the films, but also scouring the Internet for regular people and celebrities with the desired facial features. He used a program of morphology algorithms, and Photoshop, and a lot of time, paying close attention to facial proportions and how nos were structured. While the artist doesn't reveal exactly who his models were, you may notice similar features in the public domain. Among the revelations is that Aladdin vaguely resembles John Krasinski of the Bureau. Graw's only regret may not go far enough in the realm of reality. It should have added big, skin defects, and other things that humanize the characters, he says. Now if only I could stop thinking of these images as mug shots. Picture: Walt Disney Pictures/ Walt Disney Feature Animation Have you ever heard of iconic films like The Lion King, Frozen and The Little Mermaid? We've seen princesses as they find their way through difficult times and memorable animals trying to navigate their way through life. you know all the main characters from the movies, but the supporting characters add magic to the movies as well. Can you imagine Mulan without his faithful horse Khan? The film would be very different without him! Disney characters were often inspired by the people, places and things Walt and his animators knew. Sometimes, even animators or voice actors to characters influenced their appearance. For example, Scar from The Lion King, voiced by Jeremy Irons, was drawn to look like him. A look side by side reveals many similarities. Some animal characters, such as Tramp de Lady and the Tramp, were inspired by real-life animals. Tramp was brought to life after an entertainer found a lost dog.
